

CASH BASED INTERVENTION ANNUAL DASHBOARD 2019

OVERVIEW

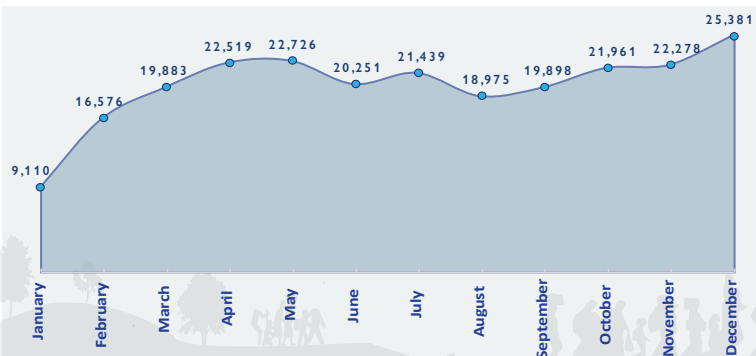

As of October 2019, more than 944,682 Rohingya were estimated to have taken refuge in Bangladesh having fled violence and persecution in Myanmar (NPM Round 16). Emergency humanitarian aid such as food, WASH, shelter, site management, health and nutrition remain in short supply in Rohingya camp settings and host communities. With restricted movement and insufficient land within their settlements to support subsistence farming, Rohingya livelihood opportunities are critically limited. Cash Based Interventions (CBIs) have been assessed to have the potential to make humanitarian response to the crisis more cost-efficient and have a greater impact in reaching beneficiary needs.

Since 2018, IOM cash-based intervention through the cash-for-work (CFW) approach has been supporting vulnerable families. In 2019, IOM reached nearly 50,000 beneficiaries across 46 locations (32 camp sites and 14 host community locations) in Cox's Bazar, Bangladesh. With an average of 13,000 beneficiaries receiving cash-for-work payments monthly, IOM cash-for-work assistance ensures families have access to resources for meeting their basic needs, while other unconditional cash grants are provided to support the development of small businesses. These interventions aim to support beneficiaries in gradually rebuilding their livelihoods in a dignified manner while using community development projects to promote social cohesion and peaceful coexistence between migrants and host communities.
